2002 UNITY Fundraising Campaign Kick-Off Ready To Roll

The GLRC of Cedar Rapids is hosting its 2002 fundraising kick-off Open House on Sunday, February 24, from 5:00 PM to 8:00 PM at the GLRC. Please join us for hors d'oeuvres, coffee, and punch. This is a great chance for you to meet the 2002 Board of Directors. If you haven't been part of GLRC activities in a while, this is an opportunity to renew your involvement. The February Open House also provides an excellent chance to drop off your tax-deductible donation.

Your donations ensure that the GLRC will be a part of the future. Without the help of its sponsors, the GLRC would not exist. Last year, GLRC sponsors donated approximately $4,000. Those dollars were spent wisely, keeping the phone line answered, keeping lights on at the office, providing information and referral services to GLBT members in need of advice, keeping the Resource Line in circulation, helping maintain the GLRC Web site, and educating the community.

Watch your mail for this year's fundraising letter and brochure.

If there are things you'd like to see the GLRC do in the future, or if you have some constructive criticisms, bring your concerns along with you. The GLRC Board of Directors hopes to see you at the 2002 Unity Fundraising Campaign Kick-Off on February 24th.

Past Iowa Emperor Carries the Olympic Flame in Nebraska

Throughout the next month, the fiery symbol of competitive passion and victory will be passed from hand to hand as it makes its way to Salt Lake City, Utah, for the 2002 Olympic Winter Games. Every two years, as this quintessential athletic competition descends upon the world, all eyes turn to the Olympic flame, and to those who have the honor of carrying the ultimate symbol of the Games.

Troy Haasis, now an Omaha, Nebraska resident, Emperor 6 of the Imperial Court of Iowa and currently Mr. Gay Pride Nebraska, was among the 11,500 people chosen to carry the flame this year. He filled his official capacity as an Olympic Torchbearer on Thursday, January 10, 2002, in Omaha as the flame passed through the Omaha area.

More than 210,000 people were nominated from March to May 2001 through the Chevrolet and Coca-Cola programs nationwide. Nominations were accepted about people whom the nominators felt had been or were an "inspiration" to their families, friends or communities. These nominations were reviewed by committees and chosen by the Salt Lake Organizing Committee this summer.

The 7,200 torchbearers were announced on October 4 in a nationwide day of press conferences in each city the Olympic flame is passing through on its 65-day, 13,500-mile journey from Atlanta to Salt Lake City. The Olympic Torchbearers represent 1/100th of 1% of the American population. They were told they actually had a better chance of winning a lottery than being selected as a Torchbearer. An additional 4,000 Olympic Torchbearers were selected through programs involving sponsors, providers and Olympians and other athletes from several U.S. Olympic national governing bodies.

The official Web site of the 2002 Winter Olympic Games notes, "This year's relay theme is inspiration. Torchbearers will be individuals who have inspired others, who serve their community in an exemplary manner, who embody the Olympic spirit, and who have overcome adversity. Other than competing, there is no better way for an American to capture the spirit of the Olympic Dream!"

Haasis, 32, said he was shocked that he had been chosen as a Torchbearer. But he was excited to know that an openly gay American can be honored with this opportunity. His nominator has remained anonymous, but he feels it is someone whom he has helped over the last 15 years.

"Having spent almost half of my life raising monies for persons across Iowa and Nebraska who are less fortunate than I am leads you to be looked upon by some people as an inspiration."

Haasis is a member of the Imperial Court of Iowa and Nebraska and has held numerous city, state and bar titles throughout the Midwest. He has spent 15 years helping to raise well over $50,000 for charities such as the Susan Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, the All Iowa AIDS Benefit, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation, HEROES, and many others. He also created the

Scholarship Information

The GLRC of Cedar Rapids is pleased to announce that there are scholarships available from two gay and lesbian organizations in the state.

The first scholarship is "The First Friday Breakfast Club Scholarship." This scholarship is from a group of gay men who are dedicated to awarding scholarships to high school seniors who have participated in efforts to reduce homophobia and increase awareness and tolerance of gay and lesbian issues in their school or community.

This scholarship awards at least one scholarship of up to three thousand dollars, with preference given to applicants attending a higher education institution in the state of Iowa. There are no restrictions or limitations in the selection process based upon sex, race, religion, creed, marital status or gender orientation of the prospective recipient or his or her relatives.

The other scholarship is the "Matthew Shepard Scholarship," which is sponsored by Lambda Beta Nu, a lesbian breakfast club, and The First Friday Breakfast Club. These scholarships are named in the memory of Matthew Shepard, a Wyoming college student who was murdered in 1998 because he was gay. These scholarships are underwritten by a generous grant from the Rick Eychaner Charitable Foundation.

The deadline for both scholarship programs is March 31, 2002.

Each year up to three scholarships are awarded to high school students attending any of the three Iowa state universities. The scholarships cover tuition, books, and fees and are renewable for four years based on academic progress and community service.

The Matthew Shepard Scholarship is awarded to openly gay and lesbian students who show good academic achievement and have a record of community service and/or involvement with the GLBT community. Financial need is also taken into consideration during the selection process. There are no restrictions or limitations in the selection process based on sex, race, religion, or creed, marital status, or employment status of the prospective recipient or his or her relatives.

The recipients of both these scholarships must be willing to have the scholarship award and selection criteria announced publicly when the scholarships are awarded.

The GLRC of Cedar Rapids has brochures and application packets available for both scholarships. These can be obtained at the GLRC during open house hours or you can have the information sent to you by calling 319-366-2055 and leaving a message stating you are requesting information on these scholarships. Leave your mailing address and we will get the information out to you via the mail. Applications forms can also be downloaded from the First Friday Breakfast Clubs website at: www.ffbc-iowa.org. The deadline for both scholarship programs is March 31, 2002.

Pride Meeting Minutes

1/13/2002

Next Pride Committee meeting is Sunday, January 27, 5 PM in the GLRC office.

We are looking at fundraisers including a chili feed and a breakfast within the next couple months. We agreed not to have either of these events as an after-bar get together. There are too many liabilities and potential for problems.

The Pride Committee is looking at themes for this year's PrideFest. "Diversity in Unity" was suggested. The committee is still open for suggestions and comments.

We need to move the deadline for the logo design contest sooner than April as we will need to move on T-shirt designs and other advertising material.

We agreed upon adding another category for corporate sponsors, calling it something like "Platinum Plus" or "Titanium" to reflect contributions over $1,000.

For next meeting, we will discuss more about what kind of events we would like to see at PrideFest this year so that we can start lining up gigs, events, and other acts. It is conceivable to allow sponsors to sponsor specific events.

Tony will be talking with some of the Iowa City Pride Committee members to make sure there is not too much overlapping of events or stepping on toes. Also, it would be good to coordinate some events schedules with the Iowa City Pride for that reason.

Day of Silence

Local students in the Linn County area are working on observing Day of Silence.

In 1996, then 18-year-old student Maria Pulzetti first conceived of the Day of Silence after writing a paper on non-violent protest and grassroots organizing. In the seven years since, the project has grown into a national effort involving hundreds of groups and thousands of students in both high schools and colleges around the country. From the first-ever Day of Silence at the University of Virginia in 1996, to the more recent organizing of the project at Lake Orion High School (Lake Orion, Michigan) last year, its textured history reflects its diversity in both numbers and reach. Here's a brief history, taken from <http://www.dayofsilence.org/>.

1996 - The Day of Silence is born. Students organized the first Day of Silence, its original name, at the University of Virginia. With over 150 students participating, those involved felt it was a great success. The Day of Silence received extensive local press coverage and a positive response from the UVA community members, motivating Maria Pulzetti to take the Day of Silence nationally.

1997 - From one, to one hundred, National Day of Silence takes off With a Web page and much dedication, Pulzetti and then 19-year-old Jessie Gilliam, developed the project to be used in schools across the country. It was renamed the National Day of Silence, and that year nearly 100 colleges and universities participated. Some schools in Australia heard about the project and modeled a similar day for Australian schools.

1998 - The day keeps growing, the project begins Pulzetti and Gilliam realized they couldn't expand the National Day of Silence alone, so they organized a team of regional coordinators who could assist schools better by working with and understanding local networks. Expanding from a one-day vow of silence to include additional actions and educational events, the Day of Silence Project was officially inaugurated. That year, for the first time in a recognized number, students in high schools joined the organizing efforts, helping double the number of participating schools to over 200.

1999-2001 - More people, more time, a message of unity sets in

Through the sponsorship of Advocates for Youth, Gilliam worked part-time over the summer of 1999 to maintain and expand the Day of Silence Project. A first in the project's history, a team of volunteers met for a weekend in Boston to discuss strategy and develop future plans towards assisting schools. The Day of Silence Project continued to support high schools, colleges and universities around the country with volunteers led by then 18-year-old Chloe Palenchar, as the National Project Coordinator. Over 300 high schools participated that year.

2001 - Current - Day of Silence Project; still growing, still strong Chris Tuttle, GLSEN (Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network) National Student Organizer, Gilliam and Palenchar developed a proposal to provide the Day of Silence Project with new funding, staff, volunteers and an official organizational sponsor, GLSEN. To ensure its success, GLSEN developed a first-ever Day of Silence Project Advisory Board (which includes Pulzetti, Gilliam and Palenchar) to help build upon past successes, a Leadership Team of students to support high school organizers around the country and a partnership with the United States Student Association, to ensure colleges and universities receive equal support.

Today - The possibilities are endless

Just imagine: thousands of students, from San Francisco, California to Irmo, South Carolina, united in a visible silence to create real change in local schools. Whether used to educate classmates on the damaging effects of anti-LGBT bias or to demand passage of a statewide nondiscriminatory act inclusive of LGBT people, the Day of Silence Project is an awesome opportunity to create more inclusive school environments and make some noise.

What are you going to do to end the silence?

For more information on the Day of Silence, please visit the Web site at <http://www.dayofsilence.org>.

Rainbow Unity Foundation (www.rainbowunity.org), which annually awards $1,000 scholarships to Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender Iowa High School graduates to help further their education.

On Thursday, January 10, Haasis donned the standard uniform that is provided to all the torchbearers - an all white running jacket, pants, hat, and gloves embossed with the Olympic rings and logo - and received the Olympic Flame at 5:50 PM.

Haasis carried the flame from Cass Street and 21st Street to 18th Street in downtown Omaha, a total of 0.2 miles. His mother, sister, nephew, partner, and family, as well as many GLBT community members, lined the route waving American Flags and rainbow items.

"Because my late father, Lou Haasis, was such an avid sports fan and coach for over 20 years of his life, I carried the Olympic flame high in his honor. I know he was looking down and smiling at this once-in-a-lifetime honor I was given!"

The Olympic Flame was lit in a ceremony in Olympia, Greece before traveling to Atlanta - where the flame last rested on American soil - and started its cross-country journey through 46 states on December 4, 2001. The Olympic Flame will end its journey on February 8 at the Opening Ceremonies of the Salt Lake 2002 Winter Games. Each day, an average of 180 Torchbearers will carry the flame approximately two-tenths of a mile. At the moment when Haasis received the Olympic Flame, he was the only person in the world carrying it.
